"The book "Ontario Hauntings", by Terry Boyle touches on a restaurant in Port Perry, Ontario, called Jester's Court. After reading his book, we have visited many times."

"The Manager and staff are very open and will share their experiences and stories with you, like about the Woman in blue. They will also tell you stories of table 13; when everyone has gone home in the late hours of the night, you can see two elderly people enjoying tea by candle light. The staff has also witnessed pictures on the walls move, or spin around, the taps in the washrooms turn on and off on their own, salt and pepper shakers fire across tables, and numerous other occurrences. The waitresses don't like being in the restaurant alone during close up because it's unsettling and especially they don't like to go to the cellar for anything."
